MESSAGE FROM THE FOUNDERS

DIKSHA PANDEY

TARUN SINGH

WHAT CANNOT TO BE DONE HAS TO BE DONE

Entrepreneurs often face the seemingly paradoxical challenge of tackling problems that cannot be done with existing methods, resources or knowledge but still must be done to build a successful venture. This is part of what makes entrepreneurship so unique. While traditional jobs or roles often follow established protocol. Entrepreneurs are by definition, problem solvers who venture into the unknown and constantly seeking new ways to make the impossible a reality.

SELF-REALIZATION

SELF REALIZATION THE WHOLE UNIVERSE LIES WITHIN US.
WE MUST KNOW OURSELVES FULLY TO UNDERSTAND AND REACH OUR TRUE POTENTIAL.

Self realization is of utmost importance to entrepreneurs. Unless you are thoroughly aware of yourself - your strengths, areas of improvement, emotional stability, moral values, and so on - you cannot lead others effectively

PHOXNUT PROCESSING

PRODUCT INTRODUCTION

We would like to inform you about this product is basically from Bihar, particularly in districts like Purnia, Madhubani, Kathiyar, Sitamarhi and Darbangha. The Mallah community (also known as boatmen or fishermen) traditionally plays a significant role in cultivating and harvesting “Phoxnuts” (makhana). This process is intensive and requires skill, as makhana comes from the seeds of the prickly water lily plant, cultivated in ponds and small lakes.

CULTIVATION AND COLLECTION

The Mallah Community cultivate makhana in water bodies, managing the growth of the plants over time. During harvest, they dive into ponds to collect the mature seeds, a task that demands both physical endurance and knowledge of the plant’s growth cycle.

PROCESSING

After collection, the seeds undergo various processes, including drying, roasting, and popping. These steps transform the raw seeds into the light, crunchy Phoxnuts we find in markets. The popping stage is particularly skill-intensive, as it involves roasting the seeds at the right temperature to make them expand and become edible.

GRADING AND PACKAGING

Once processed, makhana is graded based on size and quality, with larger sizes being more desirable. The Mallah community’s expertise helps ensure that makhana is properly sorted and packed to meet quality standards, especially for exports, where premium-grade makhana is highly valued.

SOURCING

AND CULTIVATION OF PREMIUM PHOXNUTS

Our journey begins with sourcing the finest phoxnuts from Bihar, India, the global hub for Makhana production. We collaborate with trusted local farmers who utilize sustainable farming practices, ensuring that every Makhana kernel is nurtured in its natural environment. By prioritizing eco-friendly and traditional farming techniques, we contribute to the preservation of this vital crop, while also guaranteeing a superior quality that reflects the authentic taste and nutrition of Makhana.

KEY FEATURES

- Ethically sourced from Bihar's premium Makhana farms.
- Sustainably grown using traditional and eco-friendly practices.
- Quality checked from farm to facility, ensuring only the finest produce.

GRADING

AND QUALITY CONTROL

To ensure that our clients receive only the best, each batch of Makhana is rigorously inspected and graded according to size and quality. We offer A, B and C grade Phoxnuts with sizes ranging from 21-28mm for A grade, 15-20mm for B grade and 8-15mm for C grade. This careful grading process guarantees consistency quality and an optimal experience for our end consumers. Every Phoxnuts is sorted and inspected to meet international export standards.

OUR QUALITY GRADING INCLUDES

- A Grade Phoxnuts: Known for its larger size (21-28mm), distinct taste, and high nutritional value.
- B Grade Phoxnuts: Slightly smaller (15-20mm), offering excellent quality and affordability.
- C Grade Phoxnuts: Slightly smaller (8-15mm), offering excellent quality and affordability.
- Comprehensive quality checks to eliminate defects and inconsistencies.
- Consistent size and appearance for a premium product experience.

HYGIENIC PACKAGING

AND SUSTAINABLE SOLUTIONS

We believe that great quality deserves great packaging. At Risom Phoxnuts, we take pride in our eco-friendly and hygienic packaging solutions, designed to keep Makhana fresh and flavorful throughout its journey.
